

The Super power I Wish I Had

Hello, my name is Aahan and I live a normal life as a human on planet Earth. Or is that what you think, I might look like an ordinary fifth grader but I have something special. You might think I am really tall or I can do 150 games of chess at once. However I have something that can blow your mind, I literally mean that. I can read minds and talk in their mind. I think it will be amusing but I haven't tried it. So today is the day I'm going to read someone's mind.

I wake up in the morning feeling very good to test out my power. I head downstairs hoping for some pancakes but instead I get an omelet. My mom is there and she's thinking hard, and you know what I'm going to do next? I look into her mind and all I see is, "is Aahan going to get mad at me that I said he is a short person?" I immediately scream into her mind "I'M NOT THAT SHORT!" She looks at me and I glare back at her, making her shudder but I don't think she knows that I can read minds. But seriously, I'm 4'7", that's not bad for a fifth grader, right? Anyway, I ate my delicious omelet and I got ready to go to school. Maybe this super power was a bad idea. I was so wrong. I am actually thankful that I had that super power because you know what I got today, a pop quiz! The good part was that I just read our teacher's mind and then I copied all the answers and BOOM! I got 100% on the quiz. After that, I was talking to my teacher and then I looked into her mind. I saw that she was thinking that I was the smartest person in the whole class! I immediately said in her mind, thank you. She looked weird and I faked taking notes on a book but then she smiled at me. Here I thought that she hated me, I never knew that I was her favourite student.

Welp, I guess that went not too terribly. This is not how I expected this day to go. I thought that my day would be a great day where I could hear all the wonderful comments about me. However, I feel ambivalent about it. There are pros and cons to this. Like my mom thinking that I'm short but my teacher thinking about how I'm the smartest in the grade. I thought all the people would praise me about how good I am at everything. I was half happy about this. I guess I only looked at the good side of this super power, but at least my teacher thinks I'm the smartest in the grade, not that I'm not. I guess that's it. My super power day did not go as I expected it to.