

Superpower

If I could have one superpower it would be the ability to travel back in time. I believe this is one of the best superpowers because I can help myself and others in so many ways with it.

I was adopted two years ago but before that I was a foster kid for five years. One year I had three homes and three schools. I never knew that it would be my last day at that school or house. Because of this I was not able to say goodbye to my friends. Even though I love my forever family I still would have liked to say bye to all my friends. I could use my superpower to go back in time before I moved but this time knowing that I was going to leave. Then I could say a final goodbye.

Besides helping myself with this superpower, I can also help others too. Imagine you were walking back home from school with your backpack dangling on one shoulder with your school books and homework inside, your finger scrolling on your phone in one hand and your lunchbox in the other hand. After a few minutes of quiet walking and scrolling on your phone you look up just in time to see someone jump out of the bushes and grab your backpack, phone, and lunchbox. They were running away with them! You run as fast as you can after them like your life depends on it, "My homework is in there!" you shout after them, but they just keep running with your things. As you run you reach in your pocket to grab your phone and call the police, but you realize that you're running after it! "My homework! My phone! My lunch!" you cried. You thought for sure you would never see your stuff again, and you would definitely get the worst grade ever on that test tomorrow if you didn't have the homework to study! What if, I could go back in time to before the stranger took your things and I could pull you out of the stranger's way. Or I could go back to a couple of minutes before this happened and warn you. Then, you would have your stuff like nothing ever happened.

This is a great superpower to have because I can help myself and others in even more ways than these! I can do so much good with this one little superpower.