

A Day Celebrating Freedom

The Declaration of Independence was signed by fifty six people. It was made by Thomas Jefferson and his group on July 4, 1776 and approved! That's the history of Independence Day.

On July 4, 2023 family and I went to New York for Independence Day. We walked around the streets and explored. The cars were honking, music was playing, people were pushing and yelling, it was busy!

Soon we passed a water park. I asked my dad if I could go, but he said no because I didn't have extra clothes. I dressed up like the USA flag so I didn't want to change. Being clad in that dress was the best memory of 2023 Fourth of July.

This year we went to a fair in Mercer County Park. We waited in line and dad bought tickets.

Soon we're walking around the fair. My dad asked me where do you want to go first and I said, "The ferris wheel!" It was fun.

Then we went on a light up rockstar guitar ride. Mom, dad and me, we sat together and went higher. At the highest point, I shouted, "Mom, Dad! Look how high we are!"

Then we got lemonade and went near the "Kite Flyer." I think it's called the Kite Flyer because when you ride it, you feel like you're a kite flying freely in the wind.

After a while we watched drone lights. Rain came out of nowhere and we ran to our car.

I had fun! It was my best Fourth of July ever. I realized how lucky and grateful we are to live a free life. At the highest point of the Ferris wheel, I felt like a free bird swooping, soaring in dusk sky. That kind of freedom is what Independence means to me.
